

One Thing GranddadMight Boast About

It may have been a fact that granddad had never seen a movie. He may never have attended a ball game. He possibly did not own a radio and he was not in possession of a flivver. He did not go downtown every night to get the girl's neck shaved, and he only took a bath now and then. It was weeks, yes, even months, before the happenings of the city reached him, and he never thought of swimming with ladies.

He never smoked a cigarette.
He never had his nails manicured.
He never divorced grandma.
He never went to a burlesque show and took a front-row seat.
He never bought pointed-toe shoes.

He never went to the club.
He never had a dark brown taste the next morning.
He never wore a boiled shirt or one of those little go-devil neckties.
He never took physical culture or anything that did not belong to him.
He never shot a filling station bandit nor was he ever held up.
He never slept in pajamas.
There was just a lot of things that folks have now that granddad did not have. He was a real dyed-in-the-wool backwoods fossil, you might say.
But granddad was never behind with his work.
Ever think of that?

HARTMAN THEATER.

The Greenwich Village Follies, the most original and artistic of all the yearly revues, comes to the Hartman theater for a three day engagement beginning Monday night, February 8, with a matinee on Wednesday.

This sixth and all-new edition of the celebrated village series comes to Columbus almost direct from its record-breaking run at the Apollo theater, Chicago, where it was acclaimed the funniest and most spectacular revue of the current season. At least 18 of the 28 lavish and elaborate scenes in the extravaganza are dedicated to the commendable cause of laughter. This latest "Follies" also boasts of one of its strongest and most competent cast of principals and a lithe and lustrous chorus composed of America's pre-eminent beauties.

The horde of revue favorites included in the gay maneuvers of the "Follies" include Moran and Mack, black face apostles of mirth; Toto, famous New York Hippodrome harlequin; Fred Allen, droll, quaint and scholarly comedian; Ann Ludmilla, the most expert of all the native toe dancers, and for three successive seasons the premiere danseuse of the Chicago Grand Opera company; Dorothy Neville, prima donna; the winsome and talented ingenue, Florence Hedges; Daniel Higgins, tenor, Arnold Gluck, juvenile; the Deuel sisters sinuous dancers; Tierney and Donnelly, alert of tongue and toe; Lew Seymour; James Naulty; Jessie Howard, versatile and attractive comedienne; George Christie, David D. Morris, Terrence Kennedy and Billy Weston.

"Desire Under The Elms," Eugene O'Neill's great drama of a lonely New England farm, where all the basic passions of humanity are unleashed, will be seen at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, February 11, for an engagement of three nights, with matinee on Saturday. This is the original company of distinguished players, which were seen for 49 weeks in New York, and come here from Detroit after playing an engagement at the Princess theater, Chicago.

The cast of "Desire Under The Elms" is headed by Mary Morris, the talented O'Neill protege who plays Abbie Putnam, the beautiful new wife brought to the farm; Robert Harrison who enacts Ephraim Cabot, the stern old farmer; and Charles Ellis as Eben Cabot, the young lover whose passion leads to tragedy. The presentation is made by The Provincetown Players, of the Greenwich Village theater, New York where "Desire Under The Elms" was first produced.

Mail orders will be given prompt attention.

NEYSA M'MEINSays Control Your Destiny By Changing Your Name.

Neysa McMein, famous artist, was christened Marjorie and under that name was doing anything but well on the stage. She quit the stage and the name, taking up drawing and adopting the Neysa, and immediate success followed. And she tells, in an article in this week's Liberty, that if not a believer, she is, nevertheless, a practitioner of Numerology, that "science" whose advocates claim for it that one's destiny is controlled by one's name and that both may be changed as easily as she changed hers.

Miss McMein gives the simple chart of the science whereby anyone can read his or her own destiny and can adopt a new name alleged to be freighted with whatever qualities the person may wish to possess.

Among the many interesting illustrations of the workings of Numerology Miss McMein cites the successes of Irving Berlin and Winchell Smith. She says:

Many of the best known artists, actors, and writers will admit that their success first became apparent to themselves at least, with the adoption of the new name. Take Irving Berlin for instance. As Israel Baline he had taken his maiden effort to a music publisher. After he had played the piece over, they asked him what name he wanted to sign and he, so overcome with this evidence of their approval and lacking the courage to tell them his real name, invented the name of Irving Berlin on the spot. His success has been remarkable. Coincidence, you say. Ask Mr. Berlin what he thinks.

It is said that in the days of his obscurity as a struggling writer, Winchell Smith consulted a numerologist, who advised him to reverse the order of the words, "Smith shall win" and take the result as his pen name. Smith's subsequent career certainly gives me one more peg on which to hang my theory.

Another shining example is President Wilson, who came to the chair of History at Princeton as Thomas W. Wilson and, while there, dropped the Thomas and began to call himself Woodrow Wilson.

Solitary Life Led by Aged Anchorite

In the center of a forest not far from Czernovitz in the Bukovinian province of Rumania lives an old hermit whose real name nobody knows, but who is called "Metro." At least eighty years old, he has led a solitary existence since 1910. It is said that he then met financial misfortune and decided to cut himself off from the world. He has built two primitive huts, one for winter and one for summer, and he never strays more than a few hundred yards from them. He keeps a leaf fire burning always and is an ardent sun worshiper. His food consists chiefly of acorns and other nuts. Invariably he refuses to accept food or other gifts from visitors. His clothes are of the simplest, and are tied together by cords. When he bathes he strips himself and lets the rain do the rest. He is held in great respect by the natives of the locality, but he dislikes and resents the presence of strangers.

Perique Tobacco Is Louisiana Product

Baton Rouge, La.—In the parish of St. James, a short way from New Orleans, is a historic and picturesque industry, infinitesimal in comparison with many of the other bountiful agricultural crops of the state, but which is peculiarly Louisiana. This is the perique tobacco industry, alone in the world.

First grown many years ago by an Arcadian, whose name the tobacco now bears, its cultivation has been kept up continuously ever since by direct lineal descendants of the original M. Perique.

Cultivation is confined to a very small area on the banks of the Mississippi, where a favorable combination of soil and climate is particularly adapted to its growth. This tobacco, which finds its chief use as a seasoning for mixtures, is exceedingly strong, with a distinct flavor and aroma. Not many more than 500 acres are given over to its growth.

Danger Somewhere

Two men were watching two women pitching their tent at an auto camp in the mountains. "It's dangerous for women to be traveling around alone that way," remarked one, as the women set up their cots and unrolled their bedding. Just then one of the women opened a satchel, pulled out a big revolver, dumped out some cartridges and began cleaning and oiling the weapon. "Yes," said the other man, "It is dangerous. Mighty dangerous."

"Cabbages and Kings"

THERE have been many conjectures as to what was contained in the bowl of old King Cole. Some say wine and others think not. In all probability, it was sauerkraut. For the effect of sauerkraut on the disposition is very similar to that of the contents of the bowl on the king. He is clearly described as "a merry old soul." To be merry, one must be healthy, and there is no food more conducive to health than sauerkraut. Its natural lactic acid cleanses and disinfects the digestive tract from impurities and toxins. Scientists place it among the most valuable of preventive and corrective foods. Sauerkraut is cabbage in its most easily digested form. It may well be considered the family tonic. And, now that it comes in cans, sauerkraut is conveniently accessible to everyone. Moreover, in this form, its cleanliness is assured, since the commercially preserved product is handled with all sanitary precautions. The old-fashioned way of having the grocer dip it out of a barrel left much to be desired.

The regulation method of serving sauerkraut may be pleasantly varied by combining it with other foods. Delicious salads may be made by mixing canned sauerkraut with chopped apples and celery; with canned pineapple or grapefruit, marshmallows and nuts; or with hard-boiled eggs and stuffed olives. And here is a recipe for Sauerkraut Chop Suey:—Boil 2 cups rice in salted water and drain. Melt 4½ tablespoons butter and add rice. Cook three minutes. Add one can tomato soup, one medium size can sauerkraut, 2½ cups cold chicken, veal or pork, 2½ cups stock, and cook five minutes.

A Nourishing Dainty

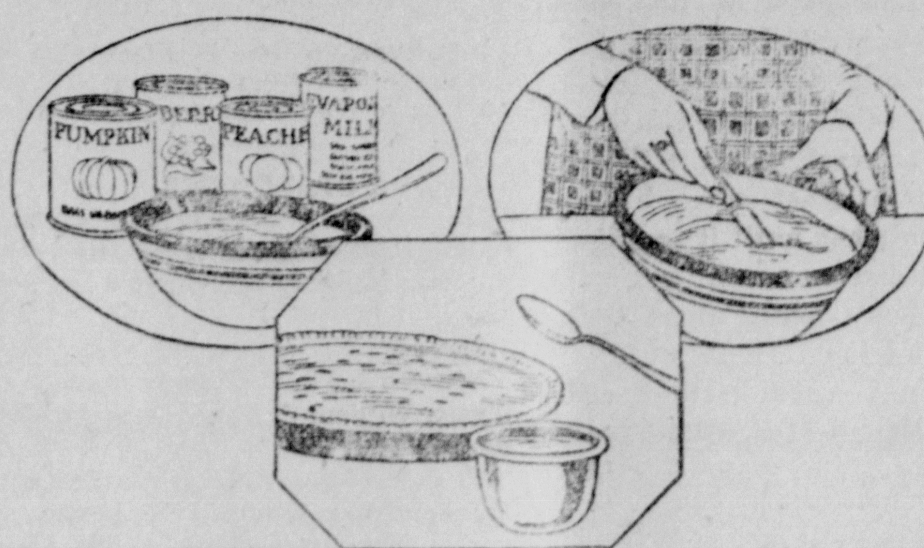

THE dessert course may be made at once an epicurean delight and a source of real nutriment, by serving that delicious dainty known as "apple whip"—or "apple snow." It is very simple to make, if one has at hand a can of applesauce. For even apples are now put up in this convenient and well-cooked form. The work of peeling, coring, cutting, cooking and straining is thus eliminated. To the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs add gradually a medium size can of applesauce. Sweeten to taste with powdered sugar and continue beating until the mixture is light and fluffy. Serve in individual sherbet-glasses, with a bit of whipped cream and a maraschino cherry topping each. This combination of eggs, cream and fruit has real food value, and at the same time makes a light and palatable finish for a substantial meal.

One does not always have a supply of whipping cream on hand; so it is well for the housewife to know that she can use evaporated milk and whip it just as satisfactorily as the fresh cream. This is because the cream is all left in the best brands of evaporated milk. It is necessary only to chill it thoroughly before whipping; also the bowl in which it is to be whipped. It should be whipped just before serving, as it will not stand up so long as fresh cream. If desired, sweeten and flavor with a little vanilla. It will be found to be a delicious and economical substitute for whipped cream.

Apple whip is a dainty, not-too-heavy dessert which rounds off to perfection the mid-day or evening meal. It appeals to children as a "sweet," and is especially nourishing for them.

The Great American Dessert

ALL the world over, we Americans are known as a pie-eating nation. Our fondness for pie has come to be regarded as a national trait. Our farmers like it for breakfast. It is our business men's favorite luncheon. The American housewife is expected to supply her family with pie, almost daily. It is a staple dessert.

The modern cook is fortunate in having many different kinds of filling for pie put up in ready-to-serve form. After making her pie-crust, she has but to open a can of pumpkin, mince-meat, peaches, apricots or berries of any kind, pour the contents upon the lower layer of pastry dough, and the pie is ready for the oven. If desired, a top layer of pastry may be used. The making of the crust is now the only real labor connected with pie-making.

Even the filling for apple pie—that general favorite—is now made ready for the housewife in the delicious form of canned applesauce. The addition of a few drops of lemon-juice will increase its tartness, while one or two eggs beaten well may be added for richness. The ready-to-serve pumpkin is smooth and creamy. A little spice may be added to suit the individual taste. The use of canned berries for pie saves quite a bit of time for the housewife.

Second Husband Gives Estate to Enoch Arden

New York.—Abraham Bromberg, the second husband of the late Mrs. Fannie Winderbaum Bromberg, said in Newark that he had withdrawn as administrator of Mrs. Bromberg's estate of $13,000 in favor of her first husband, Samuel Winderbaum, who returned last June after an absence of 23 years, during which he was declared legally dead.

Winderbaum left his home in 1902, when he, his wife and their three children were living in New Haven. He went to San Francisco. His wife received one letter from him, but no further word, and in 1911 she asked the Orphan's court in Newark to declare her husband legally dead, so she might collect his $500 insurance. Her application was granted and she was married to Bromberg a month later. When Winderbaum came back last June his wife fainted from the shock of seeing him and died a few weeks later. He retained an attorney to fight for her estate.

I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. Overcoming Tuberculosis

Tuberculosis in the Irish Free State is gradually lessening, statistics show. In 1919 one in about every seventy of the population was affected by some form of the disease, while in 1923 the proportion had diminished to about one in every ninety. The decrease in deaths from all forms of tuberculosis in five years was 1,371. In 1923 the tuberculosis death rate was 1.41 a 1,000.

ONCE NOTED SALOON
IS NOW CURIO SHOP

Great Display of Snakes' Rattles and Antlers.

San Antonio, Texas.—In the heart of San Antonio is a saloon which is known round the world for its curios. In the days when a fellow could raise a thirst this curio shop, which persists in keeping the name of the saloon in spite of its Volstead dignity, brought horns and heads from all parts of the globe to the city.

The horns, about a thousand of them, including heads, are still on display. This is the finest collection of its kind in the world and a unique one. In it there are represented the horns, and heads with horns attached, of deer, elk, rhinoceros, walrus, giraffe, etc., from all parts of the earth. Almost any animal that can boast a horn is to be found at Albert's Buckhorn curio shop, as it is called today.

Over the bar there is mounted the largest steer head in the world, the dimensions of which are, from tip to tip, 7 feet 9 inches, 11 feet along the horns and 21 inches around the base of the horn.

This is an African product and is valued at $5,000. To compare with this is the smallest cow horn, which is 10½ inches long and 3¾ inches around the base.

Forty-two-Prong Antlers.

Other African products are the heads of the bull and cow buffalo, the springbok, "boschbok," "Lichtenstein hartebeest," gazelle, gemsbok, Koker's hartebeest and the brindie gnu. Besides there are many other conspicuous heads.

Among the deer specimens is the 42-pronged head, which is a rarity. Musk deer, Axis deer, deer goat, antelope and mountain deer are to be seen. These latter are from India. Other foreign deer are the Sikla and Shomberg varieties from China, elk heads from Colorado and the Canadian and Alaska moose and the Norwegian moose.

Here are to be found the Rocky mountain wild sheep and goats, and particularly interesting are eight sets of deathlocked horns. These are the result of some primitive deer fight for the love of a mate. The prongs of the antlers became locked and the deer died before they could unlock them.

Texas has the greatest variety represented, however. These heads and necks are in their natural poses. There are the wild Texas mustangs, the longhorn steers, two of the heads having horns measuring, respectively, 3 feet 13½ inches from tip to tip and the other 7 feet 1½ inches. Texas antelope and deer have horns in the Buckhorn.

Thirty Thousand Snake Rattles. Above the bar, which is now devoted to soft drinks, is a fine specimen of a buffalo head, flanked by fine deer heads. Around the walls are cases with pictures of Indians, flags, cactus, eagles, etc.

One of the unique things about the place are the 30,000 rattlesnake rattles represented. On one wall is an impressive picture of the United States flying coat of arms. Upon close inspection it is found to be made up entirely of rattles, highly polished. There are 925 snakes represented in this one picture, which is highly artistic. Other rattler pictures are two Indian heads, with a bow and arrow between them, composed of 1,000 rattles, one titled "A Rattling Fine Deer," which is made of 674 rattles.

A gruesome detail is the enormous African gorilla, with many human characteristics, which was shot October 9, 1914, by one Wilhelm Mayer, in Abassa Land, West Africa. It is estimated that the age of the animal was twenty-five years. The height is 5 feet 4 inches; chest, 4 feet 6 inches; arm length, 3 feet 7 inches and hand length 12 inches.

Albert Friederich, founder and proprietor of the place in 1881, still runs the business and still is on the look out for any new specimen he can find.

to Unwashed Colony

Irkutsk, Siberia.—Government sanitary inspectors have discovered several hundred miles from here a large community of Russians who have never washed or bathed and who have never used water for any other purpose except to drink.

When the inspectors tried to induce the natives to bathe there was almost a riot. The first man who was compelled to bathe was reported to have died of fright.

The members of the community, who live in great isolation and under the most primitive conditions, had never even washed their clothes or their cooking and eating utensils.

GRAND JURY IS INVESTIGATING
THOS. W. MILLER

Alien Property Custodian—
Mal S. and Harry M. Daugherty Were Witnesses.

New York, Feb. 4.—(UP.)—

Belief that new evidence has been unearthed by the special federal grand jury investigating the methods of former Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller, which may lead to a new startling revelation, was current here today.

The latest developments in this second investigation into the return of $7,000,000 in securities of the American Metals Corporation in 1921 and which gave rise to this belief were:

1—A report that former Attorney General Harry Daugherty has given the information which he has hitherto refused in his previous testimony before investigating committees in Washington.

2—Mal S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general and Washington Court House, Ohio, banker, has appeared eight separate times before the jury and has been closeted usually two to three hours.

3—The strictest secrecy surrounds the entire investigation. Witnesses are surrounded by a squad of deputy marshals when taken into the federal building and often spirited by back streets to and from hotels. Reporters are kept at a safe distance.

4—The probable appearance of Gaston B. Means as a witness. Means was brought here from the federal prison in Atlanta and is now being questioned by the district attorney and his assistants. He may go before the jury today or tomorrow.

5—The appearance of others who played a prominent part in Daugherty's administration as attorney general, including Roxie Stinson, who may be called later and Adna R. Johnson, an assistant to Daugherty during his regime as attorney general.

Federal District Attorney Emory R. Buckner today declined to make any comment on the reports which center about the trial.

"I'm padlocked on this and I have been padlocked since I began working on it on Dec. 1," Buckner said. "All I can say is that the investigation will continue for at least several weeks more and that until it is finished nothing can come out regarding the evidence being given before the grand jury.

It is not probable that either of the Daughertys will be called to testify again, Buckner said.

WOOD ASHES MAKE

GOOD FERTILIZER.

Unleached wood ashes contain about 100 pounds of potash, 40 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 600 pounds of lime per ton, according to J. W. Ames, chemist at the Ohio Experiment Station. These make unleached ashes a valuable fertilizer.

Wood ashes must not be mixed with organic fertilizers such as chicken or stable manure, as the lime in the ashes will liberate the nitrogen. To obtain maximum value from the potash in ashes, it should be balanced by a liberal application of acid phosphate to the soil.

Coal ashes and flue dust are entirely different from wood ashes and contain little or no plant food. Fine coal ashes mixed with a heavy clay soil will help to make the soil loose and porous. They also have a value when mixed into sandy soil, making it more compact so that it will hold water to better advantage.

KEEPING WELL

OVERWORKING THE
HUMAN MACHINE
DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

I RECENTLY called on a big man, a success in his profession, an organizer of recognized ability, the managing head of a big business, who has done in the 65 years of his life the work of at least four ordinary men.

I was ushered into his office and found him sitting at a perfectly bare desk, nothing on it except a blotting pad and an ink stand, not even a memorandum pad.

I said: "Well, you don't look very busy." He said: "I'm not. Sit down." I said: "How do you keep this place going without being worked to death by a mass of details." "That's what I have all these highly paid assistants for," he replied. "If I wasn't able to keep my mind and time free for new ideas, I'd consider myself a failure as an organizer."

That's one man's way of working. But that isn't the way all our big men manage their offices. One of the biggest newspaper men in the country died suddenly the other day. A man of strong body and keen mind. He had come up from the bottom to the top through sheer ability. After going through the long hard years of training in subordinate positions, he had become managing editor of a great city daily, then owner and finally a dominating figure in the newspaper world. As his business increased he worked all the harder. He could not learn to delegate work and responsibility to others. So he worked harder and longer than any of his employees.

His associates urged him to slow up. His doctors urged him to take a rest. But he always said, "After while, not now."

One day he complained of not feeling well. That night at his desk he had a stroke of apoplexy—cerebral hemorrhage. Somewhere in his tired, overworked brain, an artery broke. He was taken home and died the next morning.

Dead at sixty-five, just the same age as the other man who calmly, tranquilly and comfortably manages an other great business with ten or fifteen years of happy useful life ahead of him.

The newspaper man thought because he always had been able to overwork his body, that he could go right on overworking it. As a practical printer, he wouldn't have run one of his own presses day and night for years without a rest or an overhauling. But what he knew steel and leather couldn't stand, he thought his heart and blood vessels could stand.

Your body is a machine. It will stand a lot of abuse, but it will break under constant strain. Give it the same care you give your other machinery. Have it overhauled and repaired at regular intervals, give it a rest when it needs it and lighten its work as it gets older.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE?

"A very difficult question," the President calls the traffic casualties of the time. The figures that he cites—24,000 persons killed in a year upon the streets and highways of the country, and probably more than 500,000 injured. This means that over a period of the same length as our participation in the world war Americans are losing three-fourths as many lives on streets and roads as they lost to German bullets, and running up in addition a non-fatal casualty list thrice as great as they did abroad.

"The president has asked all the governors to appoint delegates to a national safety convention to assemble in March. While we know of no formula to meet the situation he has outlined the conference may write history by focusing public attention on the national aspects of a problem made up of a multitude of incidents at street corners and cross roads. Many communities are at work seeking and applying remedies.

The figures set forth in this article certainly ought to be a very convincing argument for

GOOD HEALTH

New Knowledge is Adding to the Efficiency and to the Length of Life.

Vitamins and minerals are necessary to human, as well as to animal life and growth. A shortage of these essentials in the diet, says C. H. Hunt, a nutrition specialist at the Ohio Experiment Station, may make the difference between susceptibility to disease and sickness on the one hand and resistance to disease and health on the other.

Mr. Hunt recalls that a few years ago when we began to learn about vitamins and the need of minerals, we often heard it said that this new "stuff" about what we should eat was only a fad and in a short time we would be eating the same food in the same old way. This is often what happens when anything new is advanced, but not so with this newer knowledge of nutrition.

The consumption of milk, which is rich in vitamin and minerals, has increased 27 per cent in four years. The diet is being otherwise improved by the judicious use of meats, fruits and the better vegetables.

Varying the diet in accord with this newer knowledge of the value of vitamins and minerals and the foods which contain them is preventing rickets in infants and promoting their healthy development; preventing nutritional deficiency diseases, such as beriberi and scurvy, in adults; and in stimulating the appetite and hastening convalescence of invalids.

"No," says Mr. Hunt, "this new knowledge is not a fad, it is a part of the science of nutrition, and is already adding to the efficiency and length of human life."

IN MEMORIAM

Clifton Conrad Snyder, son of Conrad and Elizabeth Snyder was born in Ross county, Ohio, July 2, 1858. He died at Lowpoint, Illinois, on January 25, 1926, at the age of 67 years, six months and 24 days.

Mr. Snyder lived in Ohio until his early twenties when he came to Woodford county, Illinois. A year or so later he returned to Ohio and was united in marriage to Ella Gertrude Wagner on January 10, 1884. The newly wedded couple at once returned to Illinois and Mr. Snyder had been a resident of Woodford county ever since. The later years of his life he lived in Lowpoint. Three sons were born to bless this union, all of which are still living in Illinois. They are Harry Austin, of Washburn, Dennis Ellsworth of Cazenovia and Floyd Arnold of Peoria.

On November 13, 1906 the wife and mother of his home was taken in death. For some years after Mr. Snyder kept up the family circle until the sons were old enough to take care of themselves. Those who knew Mr. Snyder the best have this to say of him: He was an honest, upright man who was ever ready to help anyone, whenever the need arose. He was a tender and devoted husband to her who shared her life until death took her away. He was a man of quiet disposition. One who had faith in the youth of his community.

Parents, one sister and two brothers preceded Mr. Snyder in death. He leaves to mourn his death, besides three sons above mentioned a host of friends and other relatives, three sisters, four brothers and three grandchildren.

The funeral services were held at the home of his son, Harry, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment was made at Mt. Vernon cemetery—The Washington Leader, Washburn, Illinois.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

WILL HELP HANDLE LEGION'S FINANCES

Leonard P. Ayres, whose reputation as a statistician is international and who is vice president of a Cleveland trust company, recently became a member of the National Finance committee of the American Legion. Mr. Ayres was appointed by National Commander John R. McQuigg to the position which he himself held on the finance committee prior to his election to the commandership.

Mr. Ayres organized the statistical divisions of the War department, which have become models for other governments. Mr. Ayres held the rank of colonel during the war and was the only civilian soldier ever to head a division of the general staff abroad. The statistical division of Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont, the statistical division of the service of supply and the statistical division in the War department at Washington were all organized by the new member of the Legion committee.

After the armistice, Mr. Ayres was a member of the United States peace commission, headed by the late President Woodrow Wilson, and was chief statistician and economic adviser to the commission. He held a similar position with the commission, headed by Vice President Charles G. Dawes, which helped to work out the so-called Dawes plan for reparations settlements.

Before his entry into the United States service in 1917, Mr. Ayres was statistician for the allied statistical board, priorities board, war industries board and the interallied purchasing commission. For his services during the war Mr. Ayres was given the Distinguished Service medal.

Since the armistice Mr. Ayres has held the rank of a colonel in the reserves and is now statistical consultant to the War department. He wrote the War department's statistical history of the World war, a book which has been used as text by other governments in adding a statistical division to their war offices.

Prior to America's entry into the World war, Mr. Ayres pointed out, no army or military bureau had ever had a statistical department. "Wars used to be fought by armies," he said. "But the World war mobilized industrial financial and man power resources of the nations. Naturally, statistical machinery was a vital adjunct. America was the first to appreciate this."

As a member of the National Finance committee, Mr. Ayres will assist in the safekeeping and allotment of the funds of the Legion. This committee makes out the budgets of all divisions and committees of the national organization and assists other units of the organization in financial planning.

Mr. Ayres was born in Connecticut in 1879. He holds degrees from Boston and Columbia universities.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS OF THE LONG AGO

December 31, 1890, J. M. Schryver, of Baltimore, Maryland, sent to A. R. Van Cleef, editor of the Democrat & Watchman, the address given below and explained that it was delivered by George Atwater, one of Circleville's leading lawyers and that it was first published January 1, 1849, as a carriers address.

Mr. Schryver says: "I considered this address a fine poetical effusion. While some of the stanzas may not be pleasing to the ear of the most fastidious, they were evidently written by a man who knew the town as it was. Of course the poetry would not apply to the city of the present day."

Oh, Circleville, extend your lengthy ear,
And thru your muddy streets the carrier hear.

He comes as usual on his annual trip,
And claims from each the customary flip;

Today, he plucks from paths with thorns bestrewn,
His white and winter rose, the Pica-yune.

"An ancient sage philosopher relates
That towns are necessary things for States;
And ours has been, since first her flag unfurled,
God knoweth necessary for the world."

'Tis time each neighboring town threw labor by,
Dust on each head, and finger in each eye,

To mourn her sister's fall from bad to worse
The stink and sink-hole of the Universe!

Disease which overhangs us like a cloud,
'Till all our talk is what best makes a shroud;

Our bilious patients and our doctor bills
With their destructive art of healing ills,

Our streets from dryness, not from dullness free,
Where spreads on every side a mimic sea—

Our piles of filth which crowd each thoroughfare,
Thru a street cut crazy as a sick man's prayer,

Our lank, lean women, dragging thru the slop,
To jew some six cent merchant at his shop;

Merchants who for ten cents upon the nail
Might sell a pound of candles by wholesale;

Keeping some pale-faced clerks upon the rack,
Each with his salary on his shivering back—

Our buildings which each hour more ragged grow,
Like crippled soldiers falling in a row

Where want and wretchedness half hide the head,
And pig together in their filthy bed—

Our filling debts and failing credit tell
A truth that Circleville has learnt too well;

All, all attest, whichever way we turn
That our cursed town is a one-horse concern.

Merchants who paint "Cheap Goods" on every sign,
With words as false as Carrier's spla-foot rhyme,

Who sell your souls for sixpence at your den,
And cheat the dupe who buys it, even then—

Drunkards! with bloated face and watery eye,
Reeling to kindred homes in every sty;

Whose oaths and street brawls with their ceaseless roar
Make Christmas day a holy day—no more.

Lawyers! whose tongues your ragged clients choose
As they would dungforks, best to fling abuse.

Ye "loafing" preachers! blind as bats or moles,
The vulgar chimney sweepers of our souls,

Brass idols of each stupid congregation,
Whose hands are sweaty clawing o'er starvation;

Wise councilmen! who sleep amid your cares,
Unmindful of the lanes' and alleys' prayers,

Untroubled dotards o'er the public stew,
Ye slumber on—dogs dream, and so do you;

Pot-gamblers, fools and liars of each hue,
Hear in your haunts! the Carrier calls on you!

Oh! ponder o'er this truth, ere ye lay down,
The Devil's bidding off your damaged town;
He has cried "going! going!" three years past;
Would God we heard the final "gone" at last!

where'er today our weary foot has trod.
We've warned you, wake to man and think on God!

O'er the Atlantic wave, on every blast
In seven-leagued boots death hastens fast;

The scourge of God! the slumbering world to stir.
The cholera comes! earth's mighty scavenger!

Oh, when he comes at last, in gloom throw
His pall alike o'er happiness and woe;

When it is his to strike each feeling dead,
And freeze Life's spring up to the fountain head;

When thru the throat gasps the half uttered prayer,
And death, the watchman, springs his rattler there,

Ere yet the film is gathering o'er your eye,
If you can spare a thought from God on high,

Along your death-bed throw your failing sight,
And mark the humbug, ere all is night

Hypocrisy, white-kierchiefed, with its prayer,
It takes all shapes—your death-bed finds it there.

Or turn your thoughts from humbug's sable gown
To that small solitude—this business town!

Where ill-got wealth, vice, villianly have birth,
And want and woe breed on this dot of earth—

The squalid poor, who struggle on each day,
Wringing from cash-bound hearts their wretched pay,

The vulgar rich and their excluding rules,
Pigmy aristocrats and giant fools!

The foe, the dupe, the slanderer and the knave,
And thank God you've going to the grave!

Whether you meet or not your fancied bliss,
At least, you'll find no viler Hell than this!

Today, then, fool; begin a different part:
Go home and clean the skum from off your heart;

Be all the past forgot, if not forgiven
Live as if less you mock the hope of heaven!

Pay to your printer and his Carrier's rhymes;
"Anti, and you'll not have so many dimes!"

Adam never did understand children. He was created full grown.
Reading is the inspiration of youth and the consolation of old age.—Connor.

Variety of mere nothings gives more pleasure than uniformity of something.

MILL AGAIN BURGLARIZED

Getting To Be An Every-Night Affair At the Jones Mill.

The Jones Mill south of Williamsport, was again entered by thieves on the nights of January 28 and last night.

The mill was first burglarized on January 19th, when two automobile tires, some flour, etc., were taken. On the later visits the thieves took several sacks of flour and some buckwheat. Entrance was gained on the first visit by breaking the lock on the door. Later entrances were made through the windows.

Mr. Jones offers a reward of $50 for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the thieves.—Williamsport News.

Those Foreign Diseases

An American physician goes abroad to investigate noted water-cures, and says that when he let it be known he was rich he was speedily invested by diagnosis with all sorts of deadly diseases, with the assurance that the cures plus starch fees would insure speedy recovery. New Glass of High Value
Two Austrian chemists, Fritz Polak and Kurz Ripper, report that they have developed a new glass with a degree of permeability to ultraviolet and ultrared rays even greater than that of flint glass. The new glass, which is called "poloplas," is elastic, has a wide refractive range, is about half the weight of window glass, can be worked on a turner's lathe, filed, polished and planed, and can easily be dyed, according to scientific standards, with dyes adjusted to varying wave lengths.

Record in Life Insurance
Close to $15,500,000,000 in new life insurance was written in 1925, more than eight times as much as a year's business 25 years ago. Uncle Sam's people now carry $72,000,000,000 life insurance, which is probably a world's record for that kind of providence and common sense.—Capper's Weekly.

Dogs Imported for Breeding Purposes
Conditions Favorable Here for Stock Raising.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An interesting sidelight on the breeding of domestic animals in the United States is the number of pure-bred animals imported for breeding purposes. Most of the live stock in this country is descended from foundation stock from foreign countries, but so favorable are conditions here for stock raising that this country now holds first position in live-stock resources.
During the last fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, according to the report of the bureau of animal industry, more pure-bred dogs were imported than any other kind of pure-bred domestic animal. The official figures are as follows: Dogs, 1,060; cattle, 1,426; sheep, 840; horses, 339; swine, 21; cats, 14. Compared with the preceding year imported pure-bred dogs and sheep show a considerable increase and cattle a decrease. All of the foregoing numbers, department officials point out, are very small in proportion to the total number of domestic animals in this country, which is about 200,000,000 head. The figures are small also in comparison with native pure-bred live stock, which, though only about 3 per cent of the total, number several million head. The United States, though still acquiring small numbers of pure-bred breeding stock from abroad, apparently raises almost all of its finely bred domestic animals.

Food Supply Important for Success With Bees

As it gets warmer, bees will emerge from the hive in search of pollen for brood rearing. Examine the hives some warm day when the bees are flying well; see if there is enough honey for their use. Warm weather last fall led bees to consume more than the usual amount.
That makes it all the more important at this time to keep plenty of food in the hive. The instinct or race preservation is so highly developed in the bees, that when the food stores get low the queen stops laying. This, too, comes at a time when the colony should rapidly be building up.
Here is a safe rule: If the stores in the hive drop below 20 pounds, feed honey or sirup. Honey left over from last year may be used. A sirup that will not granulate may be made as follows:
Dissolve two and a half parts of sugar (by volume) in one part of water and one tablespoonful tartaric acid to every twenty pounds of sugar. Care should be taken that this preparation is not scorched and that all crystals are dissolved.
A good way is to reserve at least a shallow extracting super of honey as a food chamber above each colony, using this as a reserve supply throughout the year.
These facts are taken from the bee bulletin of the Ohio State university.

Chance for Improvement of Herd Is Big Problem

The old saying that "a good sire is half the herd" might be truthfully completed with the statement "that a poor one is blame near all of it." The problem of a new herd sire is one which many farmers will be facing this winter. The main chance for herd improvement lies in the introduction of better blood through the sire.
At the Iowa experiment station, by using pure-bred bulls on scrub cows, in the second generation an increase of 130 per cent in milk yield and 100 per cent in fat production was obtained. And many other instances could be cited of the value of a pure-bred sire at the head of the herd.

FARM FACTS

A little attention to the new breeding ram may make him and the attention very profitable investments.
A large percentage of breeding rams that change hands every fall go direct from ram raisers and fitters to farm flocks.
Use tankage and minerals to balance corn in feeding hogs during the fall and winter. There are other feeds that may be used if bought right.
The egg contains a high percentage of protein and ash. They are the important building materials for egg construction. Common grains are very low in protein and ash.
Meat meal or tankage may be fed separately, but it is preferable to mix it with the mash and feed in a hopper so constructed that the birds will not waste the feed picking it over.
A lot of poultry sickness traces to the drinking water. This should be given fresh daily—oftener in summer. And the drinking receptacles ought to be washed and scalded frequently.
Alfalfa is rich in egg making and growth material—that is, protein. Some good poultrymen throw a bale of it into the house with the wires unbroken, for the hens to eat as they will.

Fine, that was the expression of all that met with Sunday school superintendent C. O. Leist, at the Calvary Evangelical Bible school last Sunday and then you also took notice of the juniors how happy they were; no wonder their superintendent had a smile any junior superintendent would if they could see their department grow like this one does. It was a great turnout for such a wet day. But we have not quite come up to the 200 mark for our average, let us keep this in mind. The Junior E. L. C. E. also turned out fine for such a day, they will meet again at 2 o'clock and the seniors at 6:15. Unless the seniors get a move on them the juniors will outnumber them and that must not happen. The Woman's Missionary society will have charge of the morning service and a special offering will be taken for Home Missions. The ladies wish that all that can come will do so. The pastor will preach at 7 o'clock. On Monday evening the W. M. S., will hold their monthly meeting. A midweek prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. It is the theory of Assistant Prohibition Administrator Barker of East St. Louis, who led the search party of five federal agents who found the bodies, that Hockett and Balke probably reached the farm house in the absence of the moonshiners and were surprised and fired upon when the moonshiners reappeared.

REVELATIONS PROMISED AT KENT SCHOOL

Governor Donahey Asked to Hold Up Appointment—Charges Against Trustees.

Columbus, O., Feb. 5, (UP).—Promising "startling revelations," John B. Hannan, president of the Akron board of education, in a telegram made public by Governor Donahey today, asked the governor to withhold appointment of a new president for Kent State normal college pending investigation of charges against the Kent board of trustees.

The telegram received by the governor Wednesday but withheld until today, said:

"In view of startling revelations of deplorable conditions on the board of trustees of Kent normal school which will be placed in your hands in a few hours, I implore you to use your influence to hold up any appointment of a new president until you have reviewed the important evidence."

The governor said he had received no further communication, despite the fact that the telegram was received Wednesday.

Dr. John E. McGilvrey was ousted recently as president of Kent. The board of trustees charged him with absconding with the school without authority and with promoting an "on to Europe" tour for students which also was unauthorized.

Since Dr. McGilvrey's dismissal, T. Howard Winters has been acting president of the institution.

Apprised of an investigation of the board of trustees of State Kent Normal college may be demanded, Dr. John E. McGilvrey, in an interview with the United Press denied the rumored inquiry was designed to obtain his reinstatement.

"I am definitely out of the picture at Kent," said Dr. McGilvrey, who was here to arrange an "on to Europe" tour for Kent students. It was promotion of the tour that was primarily responsible for his dismissal from Kent.

"The request for an investigation will not effect my status," he said, adding inquiry is being asked by Kent alumni headed by Joseph B. Hannan, president of the Akron school board.

PICKAWAY BOYS AND GIRLS

WIN GAMES FROM ATLANTA.

The boys and girls of Pickaway motored to Atlanta Friday and on their floor defeated the Atlanta girls by two points, 19 to 17; while the Pickaway boys trounced the Atlanta quintet to the tune of 31 to 7.

Good passing of the Pickaway team together with good shots from Speakman accounted for the Pickaway lead.

The Atlanta girls had the edge on Pickaway girls during a big part of game but in the last few minutes accounted for two baskets which gave them a two point lead. The game between the girls was close all the way. Myers of Washington C. H. refereed the game.

Superintendent Cox, while losing two games nevertheless, was a genial host because he had that day become the father of a fine baby girl.

One Thing Granddad

Might Boast About
It may have been a fact that granddad had never seen a movie. He may never have attended a ball game. He possibly did not own a radio and he was not in possession of a flivver. He did not go downtown every night to get the girl's neck shaved, and he only took a bath now and then. It was weeks, yes, even months, before the happenings of the city reached him, and he never thought of swimming with ladies.
He never smoked a cigarette.
He never had his nails manicured.
He never divorced grandma.
He never went to a burlesque show and took a front-row seat.
He never bought pointed-toed shoes.

He never went to the club.
He never had a dark brown taste the next morning.
He never wore a boiled shirt or one of those little go-devil neckties.
He never took physical culture or anything that did not belong to him.
He never shot a filling station bandit nor was he ever held up.
He never slept in pajamas.
There was just a lot of things that folks have now that granddad did not have. He was a real dyed-in-the-wool backwoods fossil, you might say.
But granddad was never behind with his work.
Ever think of that?

HARTMAN THEATER.
The Greenwich Village Follies, the most original and artistic of all the yearly revues, comes to the Hartman theater for a three day engagement beginning Monday night, February 8, with a matinee on Wednesday.
This sixth and all-new edition of the celebrated village series comes to Columbus almost direct from its record-breaking run at the Apollo theater, Chicago, where it was acclaimed the funniest and most spectacular revue of the current season. At least 18 of the 28 lavish and elaborate scenes in the extravaganza are dedicated to the commendable cause of laughter. This latest "Follies" also boasts of one of its strongest and most competent cast of principals and a lithe and lustrous chorus composed of America's pre-eminent beauties.
The horde of revue favorites included in the gay maneuvers of the "Follies" include Moran and Mack, black face apostles of mirth; Toto, famous New York Hippodrome harlequin; Fred Allen, droll, quaint and scholarly comedian; Ann Ludmilla, the most expert of all the native toe dancers, and for three successive seasons the premiere danseuse of the Chicago Grand Opera company; Dorothy Neville, prima donna; the winsome and talented ingenue, Florence Hedges; Daniel Higgins, tenor; Arnold Gluck, juvenile; the Deuel sisters sinuous dancers; Tierney and Donnelly, alert of tongue and toe; Lew Seymour; James Naulty; Jessie Howard, versatile and attractive comedienne; George Christie, David D. Morris, Terrence Kennedy and Billy Weston.

"Desire Under The Elms," Eugene O'Neill's great drama of a lonely New England farm, where all the basic passions of humanity are unleashed, will be seen at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, February 11, for an engagement of three nights, with matinee on Saturday. This is the original company of distinguished players, which were seen for 49 weeks in New York, and come here from Detroit after playing an engagement at the Princess theater, Chicago.
The cast of "Desire Under The Elms" is headed by Mary Morris, the talented O'Neill protege who plays Abbie Putman, the beautiful new wife brought to the farm; Robert Harrison who enacts Ephraim Cabot, the stern old farmers; and Charles Ellis as Eben Cabot, the young lover whose passion leads to tragedy. The presentation made by The Provincetown Players, of The Greenwich Village theater, New York where "Desire Under The Elms" was first produced.
Mail orders will be given prompt attention.

NEYSA M'MEIN

Says Control Your Destiny By Changing Your Name.

Neysa McMein, famous artist, was christened Marjorie and under that name was doing anything but well on the stage. She quit the stage and the name, taking up drawing and adopting the Neysa, and immediate success followed. And she tells, in an article in this week's Liberty, that if not a believer, she is, nevertheless, a practitioner of Numerology, that "science" whose advocates claim for it that one's destiny is controlled by one's name and that both may be changed as easily as she changed hers.

Miss McMein gives the simple chart of the science whereby anyone can read his or her own destiny and can adopt a new name alleged to be freighted with whatever qualities the person may wish to possess.

Among the many interesting illustrations of the workings of Numerology Miss McMein cites the successes of Irving Berlin and Winchell Smith. She says:

Many of the best known artists, actors, and writers will admit that their success first became apparent to themselves at least, with the adoption of the new name. Take Irving Berlin for instance. As Israel Baline he had taken his maiden effort to a music publisher. After he had played the piece over, they asked him what name he wanted to sign and he, so overcome with this evidence of their approval and lacking the courage to tell them his real name, invented the name of Irving Berlin on the spot. His success has been remarkable. Coincidence, you say. Ask Mr. Berlin what he thinks.

It is said that in the days of his obscurity as a struggling writer, Winchell Smith consulted a numerologist, who advised him to reverse the order of the words, "Smith shall win" and take the result as his pen name. Smith's subsequent career certainly gives me one more peg on which to hang my theory.

Another shining example is President Wilson, who came to the chair of History at Princeton as Thomas W. Wilson and, while there, dropped the Thomas and began to call himself Woodrow Wilson.

Solitary Life Led

by Aged Anchorite

In the center of a forest not far from Czernovitz in the Bukovinian province of Rumania lives an old hermit whose real name nobody knows, but who is called "Metro." At least eighty years old, he has led a solitary existence since 1910. It is said that he then met financial misfortune and decided to cut himself off from the world. He has built two primitive huts, one for winter and one for summer, and he never strays more than a few hundred yards from them. He keeps a leaf fire burning always and is an ardent sun worshiper. His food consists chiefly of acorns and other nuts. Invariably he refuses to accept food or other gifts from visitors. His clothes are of the simplest, and are tied together by cords. When he bathes he strips himself and lets the rain do the rest. He is held in great respect by the natives of the locality, but he dislikes and resents the presence of strangers.

Perique Tobacco Is

Louisiana Product

Baton Rouge, La.—In the parish of St. James, a short way from New Orleans, is a historic and picturesque industry, infinitesimal in comparison with many of the other bountiful agricultural crops of the state, but which is peculiarly Louisianian. This is the perique tobacco industry, alone in the world.

First grown many years ago by an Arcadian, whose name the tobacco now bears, its cultivation has been kept up continuously ever since by direct lineal descendants of the original M. Perique.

Cultivation is confined to a very small area on the banks of the Mississippi, where a favorable combination of soil and climate is particularly adapted to its growth. This tobacco, which finds its chief use as a seasoner for mixtures, is exceedingly strong, with a distinct flavor and aroma. Not many more than 500 acres are given over its growth.

Danger Somewhere

Two men were watching two women pitching their tent at an auto camp in the mountains. "It's dangerous for women to be traveling around alone that way," remarked one, as the women set up their cots and unrolled their bedding. Just then one of the women opened a satchel, pulled out a big revolver, dumped out some cartridges and began cleaning and oiling the weapon. "Yes," said the other man, "It is dangerous. Mighty dangerous."

"Cabbages and Kings"

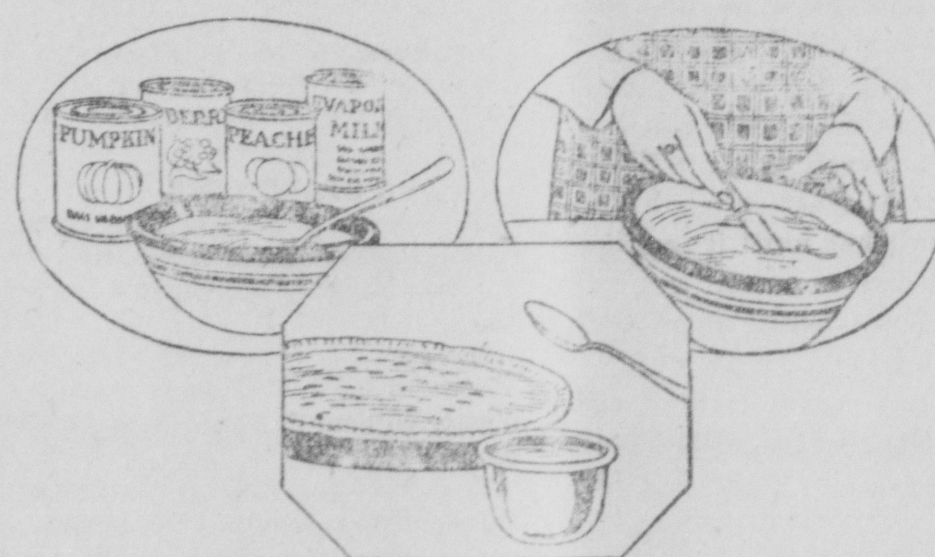

THERE have been many conjectures as to what was contained in the bowl of old King Cole. Some say wine and others think not. In all probability, it was sauerkraut. For the effect of sauerkraut on the disposition is very similar to that of the contents of the bowl on the king. He is clearly described as "a merry old soul." To be merry, one must be healthy, and there is no food more conducive to health than sauerkraut. Its natural lactic acid cleanses and disinfects the digestive tract from impurities and toxins. Scientists place it among the most valuable of preventive and corrective foods. Sauerkraut is cabbage in its most easily digested form. It may well be considered the family tonic. And, now that it comes in cans, sauerkraut is conveniently accessible to everyone. Moreover, in this form, its cleanliness is assured, since the commercially preserved product is handled with all sanitary precautions. The old-fashioned way of having the grocer dip it out of a barrel left much to be desired. The regulation method of serving sauerkraut may be pleasantly varied by combining it with other foods. Delicious salads may be made by mixing canned sauerkraut with chopped apples and celery; with canned pineapple or grapefruit, marshmallows and nuts; or with hard-boiled eggs and stuffed olives. And here is a recipe for Sauerkraut Chop Suey:—Boil 2 cups rice in salted water and drain. Melt 4½ tablespoons butter and add rice. Cook three minutes. Add one can tomato soup, one medium size can sauerkraut, 2½ cups cold chicken, veal or pork, 2½ cups stock, and cook five minutes.

A Nourishing Dainty

THE dessert course may be made at once an epicurean delight and a source of real nutriment, by serving that delicious dainty known as "apple whip"—or "apple snow." It is very simple to make, if one has at hand a can of applesauce. For even apples are now put up in this convenient and well-cooked form. The work of peeling, coring, cutting, cooking and straining is thus eliminated. To the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs add gradually a medium size can of applesauce. Sweeten to taste with powdered sugar and continue beating until the mixture is light and fluffy. Serve in individual sherbet-glasses, with a bit of whipped cream and a maraschino cherry topping each. This combination of eggs, cream and fruit has real food value, and at the same time makes a light and palatable finish for a substantial meal. One does not always have a supply of whipping cream on hand; so it is well for the housewife to know that she can use evaporated milk and whip it just as satisfactorily as the fresh cream. This is because the cream is all left in the best brands of evaporated milk. It is necessary only to chill it thoroughly before whipping; also the bowl in which it is to be whipped. It should be whipped just before serving, as it will not stand up so long as fresh cream. If desired, sweeten and flavor with a little vanilla. It will be found to be a delicious and economical substitute for whipped cream. Apple whip is a dainty, not-too-heavy dessert which rounds off to perfection the mid-day or evening meal. It appeals to children as a "sweet," and is especially nourishing for them.

The Great American Dessert

ALL the world over, we Americans are known as a pie-eating nation. Our fondness for pie has come to be regarded as a national trait. Our farmers like it for breakfast. It is our business men's favorite luncheon. The American housewife is expected to supply her family with pie, almost daily. It is a staple dessert. The modern cook is fortunate in having many different kinds of filling for pie put up in ready-to-serve form. After making her pie-crust, she has but to open a can of pumpkin, mincemeat, peaches, apricots or berries of any kind, pour the contents upon the lower layer of pastry dough, and the pie is ready for the oven. If desired, a top layer of pastry may be used. The making of the crust is now the only real labor connected with pie-making. Even the filling for apple pie—that general favorite—is now made ready for the housewife in the delicious form of canned applesauce. The addition of a few drops of lemon-juice will increase its tartness, while one or two eggs beaten well may be added for richness. The ready-to-serve pumpkin is smooth and creamy. A little spice may be added to suit the individual taste. The use of canned berries for pie saves quite a bit of time for the housewife.

Second Husband Gives Estate to Enoch Arden

New York.—Abraham Bromberg, the second husband of the late Mrs. Fannie Winderbaum Bromberg, said in Newark that he had withdrawn as administrator of Mrs. Bromberg's estate of $13,000 in favor of her first husband, Samuel Winderbaum, who returned last June after an absence of 23 years, during which he was declared legally dead.

Winderbaum left his home in 1892 when he, his wife and their three children were living in New Haven. He went to San Francisco. His wife received one letter from him, but no further word, and in 1911 she asked the Orphan's court in Newark to declare her husband legally dead, so she might collect his $500 insurance. Her application was granted and she was married to Bromberg a month later. When Winderbaum came back last June his wife fainted from the shock of seeing him and died a few weeks later. He retained an attorney to fight for her estate.

Wood is one of the strongest substances in the world, but its strength lies in one direction only. A thin strip of wood cut with the grain will withstand about three times as heavy a pull as steel wire of equal weight.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot? Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Overcoming Tuberculosis

Tuberculosis in the Irish Free State is gradually lessening, statistics show. In 1919 one in about every seventy of the population was affected by some form of the disease, while in 1923 the proportion had diminished to about one in every ninety. The decrease in deaths from all forms of tuberculosis in five years was 1.371. In 1923 the tuberculosis death rate was 1.41 a 1,000.

ONCE NOTED SALOON
IS NOW CURIO SHOPGreat Display of Snakes'
Rattles and Antlers.

San Antonio, Texas.—In the heart of San Antonio is a saloon which is known round the world for its curios. In the days when a fellow could raise a thirst this curio shop, which persists in keeping the name of the saloon in spite of its Volstead dignity, brought horns and heads from all parts of the globe to the city.

The horns, about a thousand of them, including heads, are still on display. This is the finest collection of its kind in the world for its unique one. In it there are represented the horns and heads with horns attached, of deer, elk, rhinoceros, walrus, giraffe, etc., from all parts of the earth. Almost any animal that can boast a horn is to be found at Albert's Buckhorn curio shop, as it is called today.

Over the bar there is mounted the largest steer head in the world, the dimensions of which are, from tip to tip, 7 feet 9 inches, 11 feet along the horns and 21 inches around the base of the horn.

This is an African product and is valued at $5,000. To compare with this is the smallest cow horn, which is 10 1/2 inches long and 3 1/2 inches around the base.

Forty-two-Prong Antlers.

Other African products are the heads of the bull and cow buffalo, the springbok, hoesbok, Lichtenstein hartebeest, gazelle, gemsbok, Koker's hartebeest and the brindie gnu. Besides there are many other conspicuous heads.

Among the deer specimens is the 42-pronged head, which is a rarity. Musk deer, Axis deer, deer goat, antelope and mountain deer are to be seen. These latter are from India. Other foreign deer are the Silka and Shomberg varieties from China, elk heads from Colorado and the Canadian and Alaska moose and the Norwegian moose.

Here are to be found the Rocky mountain wild sheep and goats, and particularly interesting are eight sets of deathlocked horns. These are the result of some primitive deer fight for the love of a mate. The prongs of the antlers became locked and the deer died before they could unlock them.

Texas has the greatest variety represented, however. These heads and necks are in their natural poses. There are the wild Texas mustangs, the longhorn steers, two of the head having horns measuring, respectively, 8 feet 1 1/2 inches from tip to tip and the other 7 feet 1 1/2 inches. Texas antelope and deer have horns in the Buckhorn.

Thirty Thousand Snake Rattles. Above the bar, which is now devoted to soft drinks, is a fine specimen of a buffalo head, flanked by fine deer heads. Around the walls are cases with pictures of Indians, flags, cactus, eagles, etc.

One of the unique things about the place are the 30,000 rattlesnake rattles represented. On one wall is an impressive picture of the United States flying coat of arms. Upon close inspection it is found to be made up entirely of rattles, highly polished. There are 925 snakes represented in this one picture, which is highly artistic. Other rattler pictures are two Indian heads, with a bow and arrow between them, composed of 1,000 rattles, one titled "A Rattling Fine Deer," which is made of 674 rattles.

A gruesome detail is the enormous African gorilla, with many human characteristics, which was shot October 9, 1914, by one Wilhelm Mayer, in Abassa Land, West Africa. It is estimated that the age of the animal was twenty-five years. The height is 5 feet 4 inches; chest, 4 feet 6 inches; arm length, 3 feet 7 inches and hand length 12 inches.

Albert Friederich, founder and proprietor of the place in 1881, still runs the business and still is on the look out for any new specimen he can find.

The members of the community, who live in great isolation and under the most primitive conditions, had never even washed their clothes or their cooking and eating utensils.

GRAND JURY IS
INVESTIGATING
THOS. W. MILLERAlien Property Custodian--
Mal S. and Harry M. Daugherty Were Witnesses.

New York, Feb. 4.—(UP.)—Belief that new evidence has been unearthed by the special federal grand jury investigating the methods of former Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller, which may lead to a new startling revelation, was current here today.

The latest developments in this second investigation into the return of $7,000,000 in securities of the American Metals Corporation in 1921 and which gave rise to this belief were:

1—A report that former Attorney General Harry Daugherty has given the information which he has hitherto refused in his previous testimony before investigating committees in Washington.

2—Mal S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general and Washington Court House, Ohio, banker, has appeared eight separate times before the jury and has been closeted usually two to three hours.

3—The strictest secrecy surrounds the entire investigation. Witnesses are surrounded by a squad of deputy marshals when taken into the federal building and often spirited by back streets to and from hotels. Reporters are kept at a safe distance.

4—The probable appearance of Gaston B. Means as a witness. Means was brought here from the federal prison in Atlanta and is now being questioned by the district attorney and his assistants. He may go before the jury today or tomorrow.

5—The appearance of others who played a prominent part in Daugherty's administration as attorney general, including Roxie Stinson, who may be called later and Adna R. Johnson, an assistant to Daugherty during his regime as attorney general.

Federal District Attorney Emory R. Buckner today declined to make any comment on the reports which center about the trial.

"I'm padlocked on this and I have been padlocked since I began working on it on Dec. 1," Buckner said. "All I can say is that the investigation will continue for at least several weeks more and that until it is finished nothing can come out regarding the evidence being given before the grand jury."

It is not probable that either of the Daughertys will be called to testify again, Buckner said.

WOOD ASHES MAKE

GOOD FERTILIZER.

Unleached wood ashes contain about 100 pounds of potash, 40 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 600 pounds of lime per ton, according to J. W. Ames, chemist at the Ohio Experiment Station. These make unleached ashes a valuable fertilizer.

Wood ashes must not be mixed with organic fertilizers such as chicken or stable manure, as the lime in the ashes will liberate the nitrogen. To obtain maximum value from the potash in ashes, it should be balanced by a liberal application of acid phosphate to the soil.

Coal ashes and flue dust are entirely different from wood ashes and contain little or no plant food. Fine coal ashes mixed with a heavy clay soil will help to make the soil loose and porous. They also have a value when mixed into sandy soil, making it more compact so that it will hold water to better advantage.

Lotus Gingerbread

The legendary lotus, the fruit of which made Ulysses' sailors forget their homes, is supposed to have been the same plant now used by natives of northern Africa to make sun-dried cakes which taste like gingerbread. Science Service.

KEEPING WELL

OVERWORKING THE
HUMAN MACHINEDR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

I RECENTLY called on a big man, a success in his profession, an organizer of recognized ability, the managing head of a big business, who has done in the 65 years of his life the work of at least four ordinary men.

I was ushered into his office and found him sitting at a perfectly bare desk, nothing on it except a blotting pad and an ink stand, not even a memorandum pad.

I said: "Well, you don't look very busy." He said: "I'm not. Sit down." I said: "How do you keep this place going without being worked to death by a mass of details?" "That's what I have all these highly paid assistants for," he replied. "If I wasn't able to keep my mind and time free for new ideas, I'd consider myself a failure as an organizer."

That's one man's way of working. But that isn't the way all our big men manage their offices. One of the biggest newspaper men in the country died suddenly the other day. A man of strong body and keen mind. He had come up from the bottom to the top through sheer ability. After going through the long hard years of training in subordinate positions, he had become managing editor of a great city daily, then owner and finally a dominating figure in the newspaper world. As his business increased he worked all the harder. He could not learn to delegate work and responsibility to others. So he worked harder and longer than any of his employees.

His associates urged him to slow up. His doctors urged him to take a rest. But he always said, "After while, not now."

One day he complained of not feeling well. That night at his desk he had a stroke of apoplexy—cerebral hemorrhage. Somewhere in his tired, overworked brain, an artery broke. He was taken home and died the next morning.

Dead at sixty-five, just the same age as the other man who calmly, tranquilly and comfortably manages another great business with ten or fifteen years of happy useful life ahead of him.

The newspaper man thought because he always had been able to overwork his body, that he could go right on overworking it. As a practical printer, he wouldn't have run one of his own presses day and night for years without a rest or an overhauling. But what he knew steel and leather couldn't stand, he thought his heart and blood vessels could stand.

Your body is a machine. It will stand a lot of abuse, but it will break under constant strain. Give it the same care you give your other machinery. Have it overhauled and repaired at regular intervals, give it a rest when it needs it and lighten its work as it gets older.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE?

"A very difficult question," the President calls the traffic casualties of the time. The figures that he cites—24,000 persons killed in a year upon the streets and highways of the country, and probably more than 500,000 injured. This means that over a period of the same length as our participation in the world war Americans are losing three-fourths as many lives on streets and roads as they lost to German bullets, and running up in addition a non-fatal casualty list thrice as great as they did abroad.

"The president has asked all the governors to appoint delegates to a national safety convention to assemble in March. While we know of no formula to meet the situation he has outlined the conference may write history by focusing public attention on the national aspects of a problem made up of a multitude of incidents at street corners and cross roads. Many communities are at work seeking and applying remedies.

The figures set forth in this article certainly ought to be a very convincing argument for

NECESSARY TO
GOOD HEALTHNew Knowledge is Adding to the Efficiency and to the Length of Life.

Vitamins and minerals are necessary to human, as well as to animal life and growth. A shortage of these essentials in the diet, says C. H. Hunt, a nutrition specialist at the Ohio Experiment Station, may make the difference between susceptibility to disease and sickness on the one hand and resistance to disease and health on the other.

Mr. Hunt recalls that a few years ago when we began to learn about vitamins and the need of minerals, we often heard it said that this new "stuff" about what we should eat was only a fad and in a short time we would be eating the same food in the same old way. This is often what happens when anything new is advanced, but not so with this newer knowledge of nutrition.

The consumption of milk, which is rich in vitamin and minerals, has increased 27 per cent in four years. The diet is being otherwise improved by the judicious use of meats, fruits and the better vegetables.

Varying the diet in accord with this newer knowledge of the value of vitamins and minerals and the foods which contain them is preventing rickets in infants and promoting their healthy development; preventing nutritional deficiency diseases, such as beriberi and scurvy, in adults; and stimulating the appetite and hastening convalescence of invalids.

"No," says Mr. Hunt, "this new knowledge is not a fad, it is a part of the science of nutrition, and is already adding to the efficiency and length of human life."

IN MEMORIAM

Clifton Conrad Snyder, son of Conrad and Elizabeth Snyder was born in Ross county, Ohio, July 2, 1858. He died at Lowpoint, Illinois, on January 25, 1926, at the age of 67 years, six months and 24 days.

Mr. Snyder lived in Ohio until his early twenties when he came to Woodford county, Illinois. A year or so later he returned to Ohio and was united in marriage to Ella Gertrude Wagner on January 10, 1884. The newly wedded couple at once returned to Illinois and Mr. Snyder had been a resident of Woodford county ever since. The later years of his life he lived in Lowpoint. Three sons were born to bless this union, all of which are still living in Illinois. They are Harry Austin, of Washburn, Dennis Ellsworth of Cazenovia and Floyd Arnold of Peoria.

On November 13, 1906 the wife and mother of his home was taken in death. For some years after Mr. Snyder kept up the family circle until the sons were old enough to take care of themselves. Those who knew Mr. Snyder the best have this to say of him; He was an honest upright man who was ever ready to help anyone, whenever the need arose. He was a tender and devoted husband to her who shared her life until death took her away. He was a man of quiet disposition. One who had faith in the youth of his community.

Parents, one sister and two brothers preceded Mr. Snyder in death. He leaves to mourn his death, besides three sons above mentioned a host of friends and other relatives, three sisters, four brothers and three grandchildren.

The funeral services were held at the home of his son, Harry, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment was made at Mt. Vernon cemetery—The Washington Leader, Washburn, Illinois.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

WILL HELP HANDLE LEGION'S FINANCES

Leonard P. Ayres, whose reputation as a statistician is international and who is vice president of a Cleveland trust company, recently became a member of the National Finance committee of the American Legion. Mr. Ayres was appointed by National Commander John R. McQuigg to the position which he himself held on the finance committee prior to his election to the commanderyship.

Mr. Ayres organized the statistical divisions of the War department, which have become models for other governments. Mr. Ayres held the rank of colonel during the war and was the only civilian soldier ever to head a division of the general staff abroad. The statistical division of Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont, the statistical division of the service of supply and the statistical division in the War department at Washington were all organized by the new member of the Legion committee.

After the armistice, Mr. Ayres was a member of the United States peace commission, headed by the late President Woodrow Wilson, and was chief statistician and economic adviser to the commission. He held a similar position with the commission, headed by Vice President Charles G. Dawes, which helped to work out the so-called Dawes plan for reparations settlements.

Before his entry into the United States service in 1917, Mr. Ayres was statistician for the allied statistical board, priorities board, war industries board and the interallied purchasing commission. For his services during the war Mr. Ayres was given the Distinguished Service medal.

Since the armistice Mr. Ayres has held the rank of a colonel in the reserves and is now statistical consultant to the War department. He wrote the War department's statistical history of the World war, a book which has been used as text by other governments in adding a statistical division to their war offices.

Prior to America's entry into the World war, Mr. Ayres pointed out, no army or military bureau had ever had a statistical department. "Wars used to be fought by armies," he said. "But the World war mobilized industrial financial and man power resources of the nations. Naturally, statistical machinery was a vital adjunct. America was the first to appreciate this."

As a member of the National Finance committee, Mr. Ayres will assist in the safekeeping and allotment of the funds of the Legion. This committee makes out the budgets of all divisions and committees of the national organization and assists other units of the organization in financial planning.

Mr. Ayres was born in Connecticut in 1879. He holds degrees from Boston and Columbia universities.

To little Willie had been assigned the task of entertaining, temporarily, his mother's guest. For lack of something better to say, he asked her how she had enjoyed her vacation.

"Why, I haven't been away," she replied.

"Mom must of been mistaken, then," rejoined Willie. "I heard her tell her bridge club that you and your husband had been at Swords Points for a long time."—American Legion Weekly.

At a Profit

A doctor had just finished taking the temperature of a stock broker, who was suffering from a raging fever.

"It's gone to 102," he announced in a hushed voice, eyeing the thermometer.

The half-conscious patient raised himself on his elbow.

"Sell! Sell!" he shouted.—American Legion Weekly.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS OF THE LONG AGO

December 31, 1890, J. M. Schryver, of Baltimore, Maryland, sent to A. R. Van Cleef, editor of the Democrat & Watchman, the address given below and explained that it was delivered by George Atwater, one of Circleville's leading lawyers and that it was first published January 1, 1849, as a carriers address.

Mr. Schryver says: "I considered this address a fine poetical effusion. While some of the stanzas may not be pleasing to the ear of the most fastidious, they were evidently written by a man who knew the town as it was. Of course the poetry would not apply to the city of the present day."

Oh, Circleville, extend your lengthy ear,
And thru your muddy streets the carrier hear.

He comes as usual on his annual trip,
And claims from each the customary tip;

Today, he plucks from paths with thorns bestrewn,
His white and winter rose, the Pica-yune.

"An ancient sage philosopher relates
That towns are necessary things for States;

And ours has been, since first her flag unfurled,
God knoweth necessary for the world."

'Tis time each neighboring town threw labor by,
Dust on each head, and finger in each eye,

To mourn her sister's fall from bad to worse
The stink and sink-hole of the Universe!

Disease which overhangs us like a cloud,
'Till all our talk is what best makes a shroud;

Our bilious patients and our doctor bills
With their destructive art of healing ills,

Our streets from dryness, not from dullness free,
Where spreads on every side a mimic sea—

Our piles of filth which crowd each thoroughfare,
Thru a street cut crazy as a sick man's prayer,

Our lank, lean women, dragging thru the slop,
To jew some six cent merchant at his shop;

Merchants who for ten cents upon the nail
Might sell a pound of candles by wholesale;

Keeping some pale-faced clerks upon the rack,
Each with his salary on his shivering back—

Our buildings which each hour more ragged grow,
Like crippled soldiers falling in a row

Where want and wretchedness half hide the head,
And pig together in their filthy bed—

Our filling debts and failing credit tell
A truth that Circleville has learnt too well;

All, all attest, whichever way we turn
That our cursed town is a one-horse concern.

Merchants who paint "Cheap Goods" on every sign,
With words as false as Carrier's spla foot rhyme,

Who sell your souls for sixpence at your den,
And cheat the dupe who buys it, even then—

Drunkards! with bloated face and watery eye,
Reeling to kindred homes in every sty;

Whose oaths and street brawls with their ceaseless roar
Make Christmas day a holy day—no more.

Lawyers! whose tongues your ragged clients choose
As they would dungforks, best to fling abuse.

Ye "loafing" preachers! blind as bats or moles,
The vulgar chimney sweepers of our souls,

Brass idols of each stupid congregation,
Whose hands are sweaty clawing o'er starvation;

Wise councilmen! who sleep amid your cares,
Unmindful of the lanes' and alleys' prayers,

Untroubled dotards o'er the public stew,
Ye slumber on—dogs dream, and so do you;

Pot-gamblers, fools and liars of each hue,
Hear in your haunts! the Carrier calls on you!

Oh! ponder o'er this truth, ere ye lay down,
The Devil's bidding off your damaged town;
He has cried "going! going!" three years past;
Would God we heard the final "gone" at last!

where'er today our weary foot has trod.
We've warned you, wake to man and think on God!

O'er the Atlantic wave, on every blast
In seven-leagued boots death hastens fast;

The scourge of God! the slumbering world to stir.
The cholera comes! earth's mighty scavenger!

Oh, when he comes at last, in gloom to throw
His pall alike o'er happiness and woe;

When it is his to strike each feeling dead,
And freeze Life's spring up to the fountain head;

When thru the throat gasps the half uttered prayer,
And death, the watchman, springs his rattler there,

Ere yet the film is gathering o'er your eye,
If you can spare a thought from God on high,

Along your death-bed throw your failing sight,
And mark the humbug, ere all is night.

Hyprocrisy, white-kerchiefed, with its prayer,
It takes all shapes—your death-bed finds it there.

Or turn your thoughts from humbug's sable gown
To that small solitude—this business town!

Where ill-got wealth, vice, villianly have birth,
And want and woe breed on this dot of earth—

The squallid poor, who struggle on each day,
Wringing from cash-bound hearts their wretched pay,

The vulgar rich and their excluding rules,
Pigmy aristocrats and giant fools!

The foe, the dupe, the slanderer and the knave,
And thank God you've going to the grave!

Whether you meet or not your fancied bliss,
At least, you'll find no viler Hell than this!

Today, then, fool; begin a different part:
Go home and clean the skum from off your heart;

Be all the past forgot, if not forgiven
Live as if less you mock the hope of heaven!

Pay to your printer and his Carrier's rhymes;
"Anti, and you'll not have so many dimes!"

Adam never did understand children. He was created full grown.

MILL AGAIN BURGLARIZED

Getting To Be An Every-Night Affair At the Jones Mill.

The Jones Mill south of Williamsport, was again entered by thieves on the nights of January 28 and last night.

The mill was first burglarized on January 19th, when two automobile tires, some flour, etc., were taken. On the later visits the thieves took several sacks of flour and some buckwheat. Entrance was gained on the first visit by breaking the lock on the door. Later entrances were made through the windows.

Mr. Jones offers a reward of $50 for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the thieves.—Williamsport News.

Dogs Imported for Breeding Purposes
Conditions Favorable Here for Stock Raising.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An interesting sidelight on the breeding of domestic animals in the United States is the number of pure-bred animals imported for breeding purposes. Most of the live stock in this country is descended from foundation stock from foreign countries, but so favorable are conditions here for stock raising that this country now holds first position in live-stock resources.
During the last fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, according to the report of the bureau of animal industry, more pure-bred dogs were imported than any other kind of pure-bred domestic animal. The official figures are as follows: Dogs, 1,696; cattle, 1,426; sheep, 840; horses, 339; swine, 21; cats, 14. Compared with the preceding year imported pure-bred dogs and sheep show a considerable increase and cattle a decrease. All of the foregoing numbers, department officials point out, are very small in proportion to the total number of domestic animals in this country, which is about 200,000,000 head. The figures are small also in comparison with native pure-bred live stock, which, though only about 3 per cent of the total, number several million head. The United States, though still acquiring small numbers of pure-bred breeding stock from abroad, apparently raises almost all of its finely bred domestic animals.

Food Supply Important for Success With Bees

As it gets warmer, bees will emerge from the hive in search of pollen for brood rearing. Examine the hives some warm day when the bees are flying well; see if there is enough honey for their use. Warm weather last fall led bees to consume more than the usual amount.
That makes it all the more important at this time to keep plenty of food in the hive. The instinct of race preservation is so highly developed in the bees, that when the food stores get low the queen stops laying. This, too, comes at a time when the colony should rapidly be building up.
Here is a safe rule: If the stores in the hive drop below 20 pounds, feed honey or sirup. Honey left over from last year may be used. A sirup that will not granulate may be made as follows:
Dissolve two and a half parts of sugar (by volume) in one part of water and one tablespoonful tartaric acid to every twenty pounds of sugar. Care should be taken that this preparation is not scorched and that all crystals are dissolved.
A good way is to reserve at least a shallow extracting super of honey as a food chamber above each colony, using this as a reserve supply throughout the year.
These facts are taken from the bee bulletin of the Ohio State university.

Chance for Improvement of Herd Is Big Problem

The old saying that "a good sire is half the herd" might be truthfully completed with the statement "that a poor one is blame near all of it." The problem of a new herd sire is one which many farmers will be facing this winter. The main chance for herd improvement lies in the introduction of better blood through the sire.
At the Iowa experiment station, by using pure-bred bulls on scrub cows, in the second generation an increase of 130 per cent in milk yield and 100 per cent in fat production was obtained. And many other instances could be cited of the value of a pure-bred sire at the head of the herd.

FARM FACTS

A little attention to the new breeding ram may make him and the attention very profitable investments.
A large percentage of breeding rams that change hands every fall go direct from ram raisers and fitters to farm flocks.
Use tankage and minerals to balance corn in feeding hogs during the fall and winter. There are other feeds that may be used if bought right.
The egg contains a high percentage of protein and ash. They are the important building materials for egg construction. Common grains are very low in protein and ash.
Meat meal or tankage may be fed separately, but it is preferable to mix it with the mash and feed in a hopper so constructed that the birds will not waste the feed picking it over.
A lot of poultry sickness traces to the drinking water. This should be given fresh daily—offener in summer. And the drinking receptacles ought to be washed and scalded frequently.
Alfalfa is rich in egg making and growth material—that is, protein. Some good poultrymen throw a bale of it into the house with the wire mesh broken, for the hens to eat as they will.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Cor Washington and Mill Sts.

E. A. Tovey.

Fine, that was the expression of all that met with Sunday school superintendent C. O. Leist, at the Calvary Evangelical Bible school last Sunday and then you also took notice of the juniors how happy they were; no wonder their superintendent had a smile any junior superintendent would if they could see their department grow like this one does. It was a great turnout for such a wet day. But we have not quite come up to the 200 mark for our average, let us keep this in mind. The Junior E. L. C. E. also turned out fine for such a day, they will meet again at 2 o'clock and the seniors at 6:15. Unless the seniors get a move on them the juniors will outnumber them and that must not happen. The Woman's Missionary society will have charge of the morning service and a special offering will be taken for Home Missions. The ladies wish that all that can come will do so. The pastor will preach at 7 o'clock. On Monday evening the W. M. S. will hold their monthly meeting. A midweek prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. The class leader is very anxious that the membership and others attend.
